Child molesters: find out who they are -- and aren't

■ Citizens may view a listing of the city's "high risk" child molesters -- of which there are currently two living in West Sacramento

By Steve Marschke

There are hundreds of parolees and probationers in West Sacramento, and a fair number of them are sex offenders -- including child molesters.

So how do you tell if a child molester is living next door, possibly with an eye on your children?

There are two ways to find out.

One is through the state department of justice's Child Molester Identification Line, which will tell you whether or someone you suspect is registered as a sex offender. There is a $10 fee to use the phone line one time to check on one or two people.

Callers may dial 1-900-463-0400, Monday through Friday between 9:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. They need to have the person's name. They also need either the person's address, birthdate, social security number or California driver's license number. If none of that data other than the name is available, callers may instead provide five describing factors such as height, weight, hair color, eye color, ethnicity/race, information on scars, tattoos or birthmarks.

Callers must be 18 years or older, must provide their name, and must have reasonable suspicion that a child is at risk.

In addition to the $10 phone line, West Sacramento now has a new program to allow citizens access to information on especially high risk child molesters currently living in the community. There are currently two of these individuals living in West Sacramento.

In order to be a "high risk" child molester, these suspects have met a series of state criteria over and above merely having been convicted of molesting.

They need to have been convicted of child molestation once and to be required to register as a sex offender. They also must meet several other standards:

■ They need to have three convictions for violent sex offenses, or

■ Two convictions for violent sex offenses and one for a violent non-sex offense, or

■ One conviction for a violent sex offense and two for violent non-sex offenses, or

■ Two convictions for violent sex or non-sex offenses, including at least one for a violent sex offense, plus five or more arrests for violent sex offenses, violent non-sex offenses, or other related or associated offenses.

The most recent arrest or conviction must have occurred in the last five years. Time spent in jail or prison isn't counted.

Anyone wishing to learn the identity of the two "high risk" molesters in West Sacramento must pass several hurdles, said Lisa Cox, a community service officer with the police department.

Essentially, they must sign a statement acknowledging they are only allowed to use the information on the molesters in order to protect a child at risk. They may not photocopy it or

Aquatic taxi serves crowds at festival

From The City of West Sacramento

The annual Jazz Festival held Memorial Weekend boasted another attraction this past weekend -- the area's first river taxi service. The River Otter Taxi Company made its maiden voyage, carrying passengers to three destinations along the Sacramento River. The new service -- running daily from Old Sacramento to three river restaurants including the Jammin' Salmon, Virgin Sturgeon and Crawdads River Cantina/Chevy's Mexican Restaurant -- is the first riverfront project initiated by the newly-created Waterfront Area Visitor and Entertainment Services organization known as WAVES. The nonprofit corporation was formed as a joint effort by the Sacramento and West Sacramento Chambers of Commerce to bring more visitors to the Sacramento Riverfront.

A river taxi is now a reality for Sacramento and West Sacramento

For West Sacramento it represents a significant step towards the development of the west side of the river into a viable, accessible area for both public and private use. The brightly colored vessel will make regular stops at the Raley's Landing boatdock when The Money Store and the City's riverfront park are completed sometime next year, with expansion of the service along the river as additional waterfront property is developed. WAVES envisions an entire fleet of "otters" as demand increases and other riverfront plans are realized.

"The Money Store locating here and the River Otter Taxi Company starting up show that we are serious about developing this side of the river. It's also a positive sign of our efforts to take a regional approach in marketing our assets and making the waterfront on both sides of the river an even more attractive destination location," said Les Bowman, Redevelopment Program Manager, City of West Sacramento.

Neighborhood activists:

Protectors of children or sowers of suspicion?

By Steve Marschke

An unknown person or persons recently posted fliers in the "Bryte" (northwestern) neighborhood of West Sacramento warning that a child molester lived in the area.

That tactic has caused at least one resident to be concerned -- not just for the safety of children nearby, but for the possible "witch hunt" spirit that the posters' authors may be instigating.

The resident of the Lisbon St. area asked not to be identified, for fear of being targetted for retribution.

"The flyers went up around Monday morning," said the resident. "They got quite a few of them up. I don't think it's a very good thing to do, because it accuses people by association and it labels people."

The man added that there ought to be "room for forgiveness" for someone convicted of molestation who may be trying to quietly live his life, and questioned the motives behind the anonymous posters.

Warning posted near Lisbon St.: "keep children away from this neighborhood"

"Why are they doing that? Is it really to protect the children, or is it to fan the flames?"

He also said that the posters may cause neighbor-to-neighbor suspicion to grow.

Suspect captured by cops, copter & K-9 unit

West Sacramento police assisted the California Highway Patrol in the arrest of a suspected car thief, but the suspect was reported to have escaped from an area hospital after his capture.

The incident began about 5 p.m. with the stakeout of a suspected stolen pickup truck on Manzanita Way in West Sacramento. Units from the C.H.P., with local police assisting, saw the suspect approach the car, but the man fled on foot and hid in bushes nearby, said Sgt. Mike Purdum of the West Sacramento Police Department. When a police dog unit was brought in, the man broke cover and was chased and arrested.

He was identified as James Russell, with other information not immediately available.

A C.H.P. helicopter was also involved in the pursuit.

"They asked us for assistance," said Purdum. "Our officers set up a perimeter and called in a K-9 unit. WHen the individual saw the K-9, he took off running again."

The man was taken in near Jefferson Blvd., F and E streets.

Staff recommends 'no' vote on local billiards

By Steve Marschke

The West Sacramento Police Department and the city planning department are both asking the city planning commission to deny a permit for a planned family billiards center at the Riverbank Market shopping center near Sacramento Ave.

The planning commission, a body of citizens appointed to oversee planning issues by the West Sacramento City Council, will be asked to rule on a request by the billiard center proponent for a conditional use permit at a 6:00 p.m. public meeting this Thursday at 2101 Stone Blvd.

Jose Ramon Sandoval, who operated a billiards center on Third St. near the Tower Bridge for several years before it closed, is proposing the new center.

In order for the planning department to approve the special permit, said city planner Steve Rikala, a number of "findings" must be met. In the opinion of city staff, two of those findings cannot be met by the billiard center proposal.

One is that the proposal must be "essential or desirable to the comfort and convenience" of the public.

"The experience of the city of West Sacramento with billiard halls has not been favorable," said Rikala. "(The previous billiards hall at 712 3rd St.) became a meeting place for gang members and parolees, and created a bad environment for other businesses."

The other condition city staff does not feel is met by the permit request is that the billiards hall shall not impair the character of the neighborhood or be detrimental to the health, welfare or safety of residents.

Rikala said the planning department relied heavily on an

Joint city/port meeting

The West Sacramento City Council will hold a rare joint meeting with the Sacramento-Yolo Port District's ruling commission at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 5.

The topic of discussion will be the two bodies' approval of a development agreement involving the port's plans to develop property. Also included in the agreement is a plan for the port to donate property for use in the construction of a new bridge connecting the city's southern half with Industrial Blvd. and points to the west, and plans for the city to buy the port's headquarters at 2101 Stone Blvd.

The city hopes to finance the purchase of this "World Trade Center" building for $1.1 million, with total project costs of around $2 million rendering it suitable as a city hall. Some of the city's departments already lease space in the building from the port.

The meeting will take place in the building in the council's chambers on the second floor.

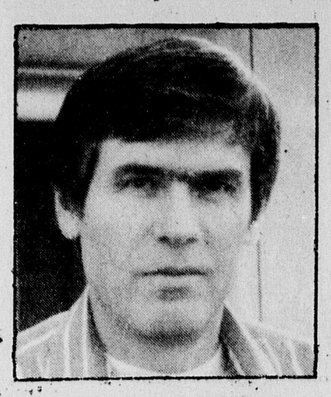
My oldest son graduates from River City High

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

"So," asked a friend of mine as he, my wife, and I sat around the dinner table the other night shooting the breeze, "what have you guys got planned for this weekend?"

"Oh, not much," I answered.

"Not much?" interjected my wife with disbelief. "Your first born son just happens to be graduating from high school on Friday night -- remember?"

"Oh, that," I said, trying to act like it was no big deal.

"Congratulations," said my friend. "You must be very proud of him."

"Actually," I said, "he's had a really bad case of senioritis the past few months, and he's lucky I haven't tried to strangle him."

"But don't you think that's pretty common," he said in my son's defense. "I know I sure goofed off a lot in my last year of high school."

"Maybe so," I said, "but Ty has more or less turned it into an art form this past semester."

"Don't pay any attention to him, Eddie," my wife told my friend. "He's been grumpy like this for weeks. Daryl is in denial."

"Denial?" I blurted out. "What in the world are you talking about?"

"He acted just like this when our daughter graduated from high school a few years ago," my wife explained. "It reminds him that the kids are all growing up, and that he's getting ancient."

After Mary and Eddie had a nice little laugh at my expense, they turned the conversation in another direction, and I suddenly found my mind wandering all the way back to the very first time I laid eyes on Ty Robert Dylan Fisher. He was bundled up in one of those see-through plastic carts they put newborns in at the hospital, and he was, without a doubt, the homeliest, scrawniest little guy I had ever seen. After the nurse had assured me (twice) that the right name was on the basket, and that she hadn't somehow accidentally put some other couple's infant in the Fisher cart, I went back to my wife's room to break the bad news to her. "Well," I informed her as gently as I could, "you can definitely forget about sending everybody his baby picture," to which she quickly replied, "He's going to grow up to be sweet and gorgeous! You just wait and see."

The first thing my wife and I noticed when we got Ty home from the hospital was that he didn't require a lot of sleep (he still doesn't) -- just four or five hours a night. He wasn't fussy or anything when he woke up, in fact he just wanted to play and have a good time, but it wasn't long before everyone else in the house was exhausted. "Isn't he so happy," my wife used to mumble when I would find her collapsed on top of a pile of toys in the middle of the night. `I'm going to strangle him', I would think to myself as we traded shifts.

As the years began to slide by, it became obvious that if there was an illness with a high fever to be caught, or a finger to be slammed in a door, or a gash that required stitches, it would belong to Ty. He was also so active that he never seemed to gain any weight and his mother and I began to question if he would ever stop looking like a survivor from one of those World War Two concentration camps.

Then, when he became a teenager, he began to wonder about his name. "How in the world did you guys come up with Ty?" he asked me one day. "Nobody has a name with just two letters in it. Everybody thinks I'm lying when I tell them it's not short for something else. And why do I have two middle names instead of just one like normal people? And what were you thinking when you stuck Dylan in there?"

"That's because I'm a big fan of Bob Dylan," I explained.

"You mean that old fart who nobody can even understand when he sings?"

"He's a genius," I assured him.

"Right," he said, totally unaware that within a few years he would be an even bigger Dylan fan than his father.

Anyway, as I was still wandering down memory lane and wondering why Ty always insists on dating girls whose names I can't pronounce, Eddie suddenly pushed his chair back from the table and announced that he had to be getting home. "Tell Ty I hope he has a really nice graduation," he said, standing up.

"You better not even let him know you know about it," I warned him, "or he'll be hitting you up for twenty bucks."

"Chill out," said Eddie with a smile. "They all have to grow up sooner or later."

"All I know," I said, "is that if he calls his father `dude' or `Holmes' just one time on Friday night, I'm going to strangle him!"

Later that night, after everyone had gone to bed, I found myself sitting alone in the dark asking myself how in the world my son could already be graduating from high school. I mean, it just didn't seem possible that the same little guy who never wanted to give up breast feeding was now about to start college.

And then I took a moment to once again remind myself that it is our children who teach us two of the most valuable lessons in life -- that it's okay to love unconditionally, and that there really are others on this earth more important than ourselves.

SPORTS

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The NBA Championship series is set to go on Wednesday in Chicago. The Bulls will tangle with the Seattle Sonics in the best of seven, to see who will be crowned as the 1996 NBA champions. The Bulls won 72 regular season games and the Sonics won 64, so the two best teams from each conference accomplished one of their goals, but now only one team can walk away a winner!

The Bulls are very strong on defense, and if you have Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen and Dennis Rodman, your team should win the series.

On the other hand, the Sonics have a lot of talent in Gary Payton, Detlf Schrempf and Shawn Kemp, but their bench will have to come up with some big games.

The Las Vegas odds makers have the Bulls as 9 to 1 favorites to win the series. Some crazy gambler in Las Vegas bet $500,000 to win only $65,000 -- now that's called betting the house! The Sonics are nine point underdogs in the first game! That's a lot of points for a team that won 64 games and beat the Bulls once this year.

The key to the series for the Sonics will be to play close games in Chicago and don't get blown out. If they can win one in the Windy City and game three on Sunday in Seattle, they stand a chance at one of the biggest upsets in NBA history. But I think the Bulls have too many weapons for Seattle and they also had eight days to rest for the NBA finals.

The Bulls will have fresh legs and should win the series – four games to two!!

The biggest fight of the decade will take place on Friday, June 7 in Las Vegas. The undefeated Oscar De La Hoya will fight World Super Lightweight Champion Julio Cesar Chavez. This fight will be shown on closed circuit at the Arco Arena. Tickets are priced at $30 and $35. This fight will not be shown on Pay-for-View TV. This fight brings to the ring the glamour and hype of the old Sugar Ray Leonard vs. Roberto Duran fights. Chavez is nearing his 100th fight of his professional career and has been a great champion, but I like De Hoya in this fight.

He's undefeated, younger, and the Golden Boy is a great boxer who can punch!

Oscar wins in a ninth round TKO.

It doesn't matter who wins this contest because you know De La Hoya vs. Chavez II is just around the corner; it's all about dollar$$$.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

The path we have chosen

Let's hope the West Sacramento City Council knows what it's doing.

Although efforts to develop industry in Southport have been unsuccessful, the city, port and several developers remain committed to that approach and will tonight sign a development agreement furthering this tarnished goal.

They shouldn't, but will. Officials from jurisdictions surrounding West Sacramento have already questioned the future of the inland port and suggested we look at radical changes to the public, industrial plan, but this city -- whose interests are largely tied to this piece of property in its center -- remains reluctant to turn a critical eye.

So we continue, step by step, following a discredited strategy without question.

Any claim that the public mandated the current plan during the 1990 ballot vote does not ring true. That vote, decided by a small margin of people six years ago, is obsolete. It also was not a fair judge of the public's views, with the developer-backed winners spending many times what local residents spent on the losing side, and with many cynical campaign promises long since abandoned.

The success or failure of West Sacramento's current plans for the port, the Southport Industrial Park and related issues -- including as the type and timelines for improvements to the Jefferson Blvd. corridor and the construction of a new industrial bridge -- will be solely on the shoulders of the current city council, and on us for silently endorsing these ideas.

All of us are now responsible -- in 1996 -- and not the voters in a bought-and-paid-for election six years ago where truth has been shown to have taken a back seat.

Panhandler management strategy number 63, offered by a reader:

When you see a professional panhandler "marking" you and zeroing in for the kill, don't run to you car and try to avoid eye contact.

Instead, pre-empt him.

Before the panhandler can open his mouth, ask him if he can spare a dollar. The reaction is worth it.

City must help motels & hotels revitalize the strip

Following is an open letter to Joe Goeden, city manager of West Sacramento.

From The West Sacramento Hotel & Motel Association

Because we have been unable to talk directly with you, we would like to take this opportunity now to explain our position on some of the important issues facing the City and the motels. Our goal is to foster cooperation so that we can see West Capitol Avenue prosper and the City change for the good.

1. Marketing Assistance

The City of West Sacramento needs to assist the Association in the marketing of West Capitol Avenue and the motels. Marketing can bring new customers and immediately improve the economy and appearance of West Capitol Avenue.

West Capitol Avenue has to be made visible and known to the traveling public. Marketing is the only way we can let people know that we are here.

Each motel does what it can to market, and the West Sacramento Hotel/Motel Association is spending over $40,000 this year to market, but these efforts can only achieve limited success without major funding and help from the City.

Financial help from the City is required in order to change the direction of West Capitol Avenue and the area's businesses. The City has recognized that its help is needed to develop the river-front, the Triangle, Southport, and other areas. The City must recognize that West Capitol deserves at least as much attention if not more.

A sustained marketing program can be paid for out of the current contributions in TOT made by the motels to the City. Over the past decade the motels have contributed over $5,000,000, in TOT and have received nothing in return to sustain TOT income for the City and bring better customers for the motels.

Creating a marketing program to increase customer base makes good business sense in order to protect and expand TOT income. In addition, property values can be maintained helping to keep property tax assessments from falling even lower, and deterring development.

Marketing is a recognized tool to accomplish promoting development, customer awareness, and opportunities for future changes. The City has much to offer; it has a superior location for business, travel and leisure. A cooperative effort to market would lead to a revitalized community, put us on the map, and would supplement the City's efforts to develop other areas of town.

Bringing new clientele to the motels will give them an incentive to upgrade, modernize, and maintain their properties in an acceptable manner. Motels prefer to provide rooms to shorter term clients rather than weekly renters or longer. Marketing allows motels to replace longer term clients with higher paying travelers. This does both the motels good and the City, and will send lower-income clients to better and more affordable long-term housing, either in West Sacramento, Sacramento, or elsewhere.

Marketing is the most efficient, and least expensive plan to change the client base and appearance of West Sacramento. Ignoring the motels can only hurt the City, as past history has shown. Redevelopment can help by providing individual solutions to certain properties, but is likely to cost much more in money and effort in order to make headway against the deterioration of West Capitol Avenue.

Even though motels and the Association have done much to change the appearance of West Capitol, new customers are not flocking to West Sacramento, while occupancy rates are up across the river. Customers that do come are happy with our rates, and our rooms and services, and they tell us that they hadn't realized that lodging was available here except by accident or by our advertising efforts.

2. Gateway Signs

The City needs to let the wider community know of its achievements and also what available opportunities there are for developers, home buyers, business people, and travelers. Gateway signs would do much to advertise West Sacramento. Gateway signs need to be placed at the major incoming roads to West Sacramento.

Being bounded by freeways gives us tremendous opportunity to let the public know that we are here as a City. Gateway signs are a must if we want to distinguish this City from Sacramento across the river.

3. Gateway Cleanup

Every entrance point to West Sacramento should be presentable. Just as the motels have improved their outside appearance, the City must do the same.

While some of the property is under Caltrans control (Jefferson and Highway 50), this should not preclude the City from pushing Caltrans to clean-up and make presentable intersections that are the major arteries of traffic into West Sacramento. The City may need to be financially cooperative in order to get this job done, or it might take pressing State legislators and officials to help.

The appearance of each entry point must be made an important part of presenting this City and its businesses to outside traffic.

4. Development of West Capitol Avenue

West Capitol Avenue needs to have the same focus and effort put into revitalization and redevelopment as other areas of the City have been. There are too many vacant lots, abandoned and dilapidated buildings along the street.

In order for there to new development, a plan for redevelopment needs to be implemented that helps existing businesses. There has been much talk about the cures of redevelopment, but as yet no redevelopment funding has been focused on existing businesses along West Capitol in the downtown area. Instead the City has spent many fruitless hours and much money on schemes to bring in new development to other areas.

Let's talk care of the hard-working tax payers along West Capitol by creating a redevelopment plan that is targeted to helping existing businesses first.

Developers will have a better idea about new development when they see existing businesses flourishing.

We are appreciative for the development to happen on the river-front, but West Capitol must not wait for three, five, or ten more years before it receives any attention. The development of the river-front should occur at the same time West Capitol is developed, or at least planning should begin now to make West Capitol development in three, five or ten more years. Doing nothing will only cost more in planning, construction, litigation, and frustration down the road for everyone. Cooperation and help for existing businesses will go along way to making the transitions real.

5. Business Assistance for Motels

There needs to be specific aid for motels to help with facial improvements, upgrading rooms and parking, or conversion to other types of business.

Area businesses are not able to this along, and will not be forced to do so when there economic situation has not improved. There must be some economic incentive to invest in converting or rebuilding to a higher quality, especially when the City has made little efforts to help existing businesses on West Capitol to survive.

Without new customers for the motels, and without major help in rebuilding or conversion, motels are forced to rely on the existing base of low-income clientele current available in West Sacramento. The bottom-line determines the ability of business owners to reinvest.

When the El Rancho and the Vacation Inn were in existence, spinoff travelling customers fed each motel on the street. Now that they are gone, we have to focus more on how to make each business viable.

Business assistance can also be in the form of not making it harder for motels to survive by toughening regulations on motels. Motels already have to meet stringent standards for operation from City, County, and State ordinances and laws.

Efforts to force motels to restrict clientele to short-term only will make it harder for businesses to make their bottom-line costs. This does not help them transition to another type of business or provide them relief until better clientele are available.

6. Sign Ordinance

The current sign ordinance is too restrictive for the motels. Sign heights need to be at a visible range in order for travelers to see that a business exists and is available.

Restricting the height to 12' places another economic burden on the motels and other businesses that only makes survival more tenuous, and does not help us to revitalize West Capitol.

Signs are vital to a healthy business atmosphere. We can have higher signs without sacrificing aesthetic considerations.

A good example is Hammer Lane in Stockton, where the street is very similar to West Capitol. New development there is not hampered by restrictive sign heights. Signs are both attractive and provide adequate visibility on a busy street.

7. Water and Sewer

Utilities in West Sacramento are tremendously expensive. Every effort should be made by the City to find relief to struggling businesses until times are better.

8. Publicity

Negative publicity is really hurting our City. Our image to people in the wider community will only change when we stop denigrating not only the motel industry but every other aspect of West Sacramento.

We need to play up the fact that we have a comparatively safe community that is a convenient place to live, work and play. Our location close to the State Capital, Old Sacramento, State Railroad Museum, Sacramento River, Convention Center, Cal-Expo and Water World, makes this a very good place to come and stay.

The fact that the City has ignored marketing the travel/tourism industry here has hurt our ability to change our image. The opposite has happened because we have allowed negative pub-

Planning Pays Off

Planning is something we have done rather well over the last few years. The General Plan, Parks Master Plan, Triangle Plan, Washington Specific Plan, and the Southport Framework Plan, to mention a few, have given us the blueprints needed for quality development in West Sacramento.

A positive aspect of the recent recession is that it gave us the opportunity to accomplish this planning and construct some of the infrastructure required for our future development.

The result of this effort - the payoffs, if you will - are already evident.

Others that will be visible throughout 1996:

HARBOR BOULEVARD IMPROVEMENTS

Fully functioning as a new, improved, major 4-lane thoroughfare, the final landscaping of this project will be complete within the next couple of weeks. This project vastly improved north/south access, as well as the appearance of the entire area.

DANIEL C. PALAMIDESSI BRIDGE

The agreements necessary for this project to proceed are now complete. Groundbreaking is planned for early July, with project completion scheduled fourteen months later. This project will greatly improve access, enhance public safety and allow development in the Southport area to proceed.

JAMES H. McKNIGHT POLICE FACILITY

The kick-off for this project took place on May 14, 1996, with completion anticipated by November. This new facility will consolidate Police operations and will replace the dilapidated, 50-year old Third Street facility currently in use.

MONEY STORE CORPORATE OFFICES

This project broke ground on May 20, 1996, with completion targeted for late 1997. This ten story landmark building will set the standard for riverfront development in West Sacramento, and will house 2,000 employees.

With our plans in place, the City is now in the position to take action, moving visibly closer to our "Premier City" goal.

This column, written by City of West Sacramento staff, covers a variety of topics concerning the City of West Sacramento's government and services. New place for high school kids to hang out

West Sacramento's "Two Rivers" teen center opened with a party Friday evening, and parks department officials hope it will provide high school students with a place to go and some things to do on selected nights.

"We hope it lasts forever," said Don Schatzel, director of the parks and community services department. "We hope we can expand the program, and this is just the beginning."

For now, the "Two Rivers" program will provide supervised games, food and a place to gather for high school students on the second, third and fourth Friday evening (6:30-9:30 p.m.) of every month. The teens meet at the Sam Combs Center, 205 Stone Blvd.

Schatzel said the program's future activities will be based as much as possible on what the program's users say they want to do.

"Right now, what we're hearing is 'trips,'" said Schatzel. "They want to get out of town. They want to go places they haven't been before, and to go places they've been but want to go back."

The new program is funded by the city and by a $10,000 grant from Yolo Unite, a local non-profit group formed to combat drug and alcohol abuse.

The grand opening for "Two Rivers" included a celebration May 31 with city council member Cindy Tuttle joining the crowd.

Drug study course offered at UCD

University Extension, UC Davis, offers certificate program courses in alcohol and drug studies this summer.

MOTELS

licity to put the motel industry in a bad light. This has to stop.

Now is the time for the City and the motels to cooperate because the future is at stake. With new development possibilities for the river-front and Southport just beginning, we are at a time when cooperation to improve West Capitol is critical. Let's not ignore this opportunity.

Please provide us with a written response to these issues. We specifically would like to know if money can be made available this year or early next year from TOT that could be used to supplement our marketing efforts.

Thank you for your time. Looking forward to hear from you soon.

Homeless woman dies during the night

By Steve Marschke

A 46-year old transient woman apparently died in her sleep Sunday night, and her death was reported to police Monday morning by a male companion who found her discolored and still.

"She hadn't been in the area too long," said Detective Ray Bombardier of the West Sacramento Police Department. "She'd been drinking the night before at a bar on Merkley Ave., and got very intoxicated. An autopsy was done today (Tuesday), and there were no signs of foul play. All her money and things were still with her."

The woman's identity has not been released, pending notice of her next of kin.

Companion Steven Spicer had brought the woman to their makeshift campsite in the brush behind Evergreen Elementary School and near Merkley Ave.

The next morning, he could not locate her and the woman had apparently moved a short ways under her own power during the night.

Summer ritual: bookmobile is coming soon to a neighborhood near you

From the Yolo County Library

Watch for the Yolo County Library Bookmobile coming to your neighborhood one day each week this summer beginning the week of June 10. The bookmobile is a mobile public lending library offering recreational reading for all ages. Books may be borrowed free for three weeks and can be returned to the Bookmobile or any branch of Yolo County Library.

Mondays beginning June 10, the bookmobile will visit Dunnigan and the Madison Migrant Center. On Tuesdays, it visits the outskirts of West Sacramento with stops in Southport, Bryte-Broderick and the Evergreen-Harbor area. Wednesdays, visits are scheduled for the Capay Valley: Madison, Brooks and Guinda. On Thursdays, it will travel to the outskirts of Davis: Fairfield School, Westlake and El Macero shopping centers and the Centro Del Sol Migrant Center on Road 105.

Yolo County Library purchased its first bookmobile in 1957. The present vehicle was acquired in 1975. Budget cuts following the passage of Proposition 13 forced the County Library to close some branch libraries in 1978 and reduce the bookmobile program to a three-month summer schedule. Another round of budget cuts in 1993 forced suspension of the program that summer due to mechanical problems with the eighteen-year-old vehicle. Volunteers did the necessary repairs and the summer program restarted in 1994. The majority of bookmobile users are children. Some of the highest usage is at the farm labor housing centers and low-income housing complexes. A valid Yolo County Library borrower's card is required to check out materials. Books can be returned to any Yolo County Library branch.

The bookmobile carries approximately 2,200 books and magazines, including titles in Spanish and will be offering children prizes for participating in the county-wide Summer Reading Program. The Summer Reading Program rewards young readers for achieving a self-set reading goal. The bookmobile and the Summer Reading Program are offered by the Yolo County Library. For more information, contact County Librarian Mary L. Stephens or Bookmobile Coordinator Jay Johnstone at 666-8005.

official police report from Lieutenant Dave Farmer in citing concerns over the business's potential gang and narcotics problems. The 3rd St. site had attracted those kinds of chronic problems, said Farmer, and the new site likely would as well.

Owner Sandoval has stressed his view that the new site is in a much higher security location, and is away from the riverfront areas most prone to crime.

Rikala said his department has heard from six to 12 residents concerned about the billiards hall, and all comments have been in opposition to it.
